What is DandyHacks?

DandyHacks is the University of Rochester's annual spring hackathon. We're hoping to make 2016's DandyHacks bigger and better than any prior year, and that's where you come in: to make this year our best yet, we need funding, presentations, and, of course, swag. We expect 300 students for DandyHacks 2016.

Why Sponsor?

Since hackathons offer experience, recognition, and networking opportunities for hardworking students, they tend to attract students of ability, determination, and resolve. Since the most successful hackathon attendees have exactly the skillset required for technical internships, many companies have started to recruit directly from hackathon attendees. By sponsoring DandyHacks, your company won't simply garner more recognition on the University of Rochester campus - you'll have an opportunity to recruit directly from one of the most reputable engineering programs in the country.

How Sponsors Contribute

As a sponsor, there are a multitude of ways to pitch in to help DandyHacks:

- 1) Mentors. Presentations and learning opportunities are one of the primary attractors of students to hackathons.
- 2) Hardware. Sample hardware gives students a chance to put their brilliant minds to work on your product- and a great chance to attract students to your company.
- 3) Food. Since hackers can't eat hardware, food is always helpful. Feeding hungry students is always a great way to earn positive name recognition!
- 4) Swag. T-shirts, stickers, water bottles, small animals- if students are physically wearing your logo, they appreciate your company's contribution.
